THE LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS

DORTS of all ages have celebrated in song the beauty of flowers. Their fancies have ever delighted in likening the purest and holiest sontiments and feelings of the human beart to the floral beauties they so much admired. Every flower, from the tiny but fragrant Lily of the Valley to the gaudy Spunower, has been seized upon and made to do duty as the representative of some condition, attribute, or action in life The sweet Verbens is the mute representative of "Fousibility." While the fragrant Tuberose speaks of "dangerous pleasures," the Wild Rose tells only of "Simplicity." The Damask Rose is the sign of "Youthful Freshness," while the glaring Peopy is "Anger." But there is another property possessed by the flowers equally. if not more important then their beauty of form and color; -we refer to the fragrance they exhale. What can compure, with the breath of the blooming rose or the tender fragrance of the virgin lily? Act tries and tries in vain to equal them. Chemistry, which seems to know. no limit to its powers of aimulation, fails com pletely in its efforts at producing the delicacy, combined with the richness of Nature's perfumes; and, with the single exception of
